FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

Newark's community action agency, the United Community Corporation, in a meeting of its executive committee members, has passed a series of resolutions to help alleviate the crises that has brought havoc to this City.

Timothy Still, president of the corporation, announced the following as immediate but not definitive moves by the agency:

"Based upon information passed on to us from our staff members and officers and from Albert Black, chairman of the Newark Human Rights Commission, the executive committee of the United Community Corporation urges:

- more -

"The Essex County prosecutor to convene a special grand jury to investigate the charges of criminal misconduct by some members of the Newark Police department;

"That the two police officers involved in the initial incident be suspended without pay until their innocence or guilt is proved;

"That the mayor and chief of police of Newark give the members of this community written guarantees that those people who bring charges of police brutality will not be charged with false swearing for coming forth with a complaint;

"That Negro police officers be placed in administrative positions in the 4th police precinct during the period of crisis; and

"That the area boards (community centers in Newark that represent more than 10,000 people) express their concern in a structured and lawful manner."

These resolutions, which were passed unanimously, reflect the opinions of a broad representation of white and Negro leaders of the Newark community.
